

2015 CPAC- Queen Financial Group Education Scholarship Recipient: Aisha Shah

Aisha Shah is a master's student in Finance at Queen's University's Smith School of Business. She completed her undergraduate program in Pakistan. As a immigrant from a conservative background where girls are not encouraged to pursue post graduate education, she is the first women in her family over generations to ever enter a master's program.

Aisha is one of the top performers in her class. She believes that while academic achievement is very important, it is what one contributes to society that really defines her/him. She serves as the Director of Career Development on Queen's Master of Finance Student Council and takes pride in listening to, guiding and helping individuals search for jobs. She also tutors high school students who struggle with math and guide students with their university admissions. She believes it is important to help others whenever one can, because we never know when that help will turn into a blessing and come back to benefit us.
